GH Expert VerdictIf you're looking for a speedy printer for your home office, the HP Officejet Pro 9014 is exactly that. It will print out an astounding 16 pages per minute, so it'll be great for anyone who does a lot of printing day-to-day. And at 4p a print, it's cost effective too. This printer does it all, including scanning, copying, and faxing. We were also impressed by the menu navigation on the LCD touchscreen that has everything from extra help to photo-editing. There's no SD card slot, you'll have to insert a USB or print directly from your smartphone.Key specificationsDimensions: 43.9 x 34.2 x 27.8 cmWeight: 8.95 kgFunctions: Print, copy, scan and faxConnectivity: Wifi, Ethernet, USB, AirPrint, HP SmartRatingsEase of use: 4.3/5Design: 3/5Instructions: 4.5/5Performance: 4.3/5We LikedYou can use HP Smart, a dedicated desktop and smartphone app that you can print from and scan to Scanning photos and documents is really fast Can be used with HP's Instant Ink service that orders you new cartridges when you need them Comes with wi-fi and an ethernet portWe Didn't LikePhotos sometimes lack colour vibrancy and sharpness It's quite a large printer and will take up a fair amount of space The printer often jammed when you cancel a print All product information provided by the manufacturer is correct at time of publication. At a GlanceFast print and copy speedsCheap inks, lots of featuresVery expensive purchase priceSlow scan speedsA small office that wants it all can get it here: features galore, including really cheap inks. HP's Officejet Pro 8500 Wireless All-in-One is a color inkjet multifunction printer built to take anything that a small office can throw at it. Granted, it's expensive, but if you do high-volume printing, consider buying it for the low consumables costs if nothing else. This MFP's generous paper-handling features include a 250-sheet input tray, a 150-sheet output tray, and a 50-sheet automatic document feeder. Duplexing is automatic. An optional second 250-sheet input tray (for plain paper only) costs $80. Ethernet, USB, and Wi-Fi connectivity are standard. Media slots cover CF, MMC/SD, xD, and MS/Duo, and you also get a USB/PictBridge port. Most of the control panel is displayed on the unit's 3.45-inch, color touchscreen LCD, which makes navigating the many settings fast and easy. I advise you to take HP's speed claims with a grain of salt: The unit's 35-page-per-minute text speed and 34-ppm graphics speed are possible only in draft mode. In our tests conducted at the MFP's default settings, it printed text pages at 15.6 ppm and graphics pages at 4.5 ppm—far short of the company's promises, but plenty fast nonetheless. Text output looked black and fairly crisp. Photos and graphics appeared grainy but had natural colors on plain paper. On HP's own paper, the images tended to be slightly dark but very smooth. The icing on the Officejet Pro 8500 Wireless All-in-One's substantial cake is its incredibly low ink pricing. The machine ships with a 1000-page black cartridge priced at $26 (2.6 cents per page), and three 900-page cyan, magenta, and yellow cartridges for $20 (2.2 cents per color per page). A page printed with all four colors would cost just 9.3 cents. But the economic picture gets even brighter with the high-yield cartridges: A 2200-page black cartridge costs $36 (1.6 cents per page), while each 1400-page color cartridges costs $26 (1.9 cents per color per page). A page containing all four colors would cost a mere 7.3 cents. Among business-minded competitors, the Canon Pixma MX7600 matches the Officejet Pro 8500 Wireless All-in-One closely on purchase and ink pricing; but it's a little faster and throws in a few bonus features (such as a second input tray), and Canon has a better overall rating in our Reliability and Service survey than HP. For a little more or less of the same, the base Officejet Pro 8500 ($300) has a letter-size platen, no Wi-Fi, and no touchscreen. The Officejet Pro 8500 Premium ($500) adds a second 250-sheet input tray, along with some media and software to get you started on in-house marketing pieces. Another competitive option is the Canon Pixma MX860. I have a very similar problem to the user Sollen above, and to the very first user posting in this thread. The printer is definitely connected to the same network as my computer. The HP shows up with an assigned IP address of 192.168.1.4 in my router login page, and the Wireless Network Test Report that I run on the printer shows no problems.No matter what I try, I cannot get the computer to find the printer. It did work when I connected via ethernet. The Wireless Isolation function was not enabled. I have disabled the firewalls, uninstalled and re-installed all HP software and drivers, run the troubleshooting app that I was told to download and got through all 7 steps with no success. I just downloaded the network doctor and it couldn't run because it could not find the device on the network. I was able to print wirelessly until a few weeks ago, using the same machines. I did update firmware for the router (Netgear WNDR3700v2), but cannot recall whether it was working after doing this or not (I do not use the printer every day)I tried to ping the IP address listed on the printer's wireless summary screen (the same one showing up on the router login page under "attached devices") and the result was "destination host unreachable."I am out of ideas and appreciate any suggestions. Page 2 Let's set a static IP address for the printer:- Print a Network Config Page from the front of the printer. Note the printer's IP address.- Type that IP address into a browser to reveal the printer's internal settings.- Choose the Networking tab, then Wireless along the left side, then the IPv4 tab.- On this screen you want to set a Manual IP. You need to set an IP address outside the range that the router automatically sets (called the DHCP range). If you do not know the range, change the last set of numbers (those after the last ".") to 250.- Use 255.255.255.0 for the subnet (unless you know it is different, if so, use that).- Enter your router's IP (on the Network Config Page) for the gateway.- Enter 8.8.8.8 for the first DNS and 8.8.4.4 for the second DNS. This is Google DNS. You can choose another external DNS if you wish.- Click "Apply".Now, shut down the router and printer, start the router, wait, then start the printer. Page 4 Download and install this: your Mac.Reset the printing system:- Go to System Preferences > Print & Scan- Right (or control) click in the rectangle listing your printers and select Reset Printing System.WARNING - this will delete ALL of your printers!- Select the plus sign to re-add a printer. Select the Default tab on the top of the window. Look for the printer, select it and then next to the "Use" pulldown, select the printer model (not AirPrint). Wait until the "Add" button becomes available. Click it.Try scanning from your Mac. Use Image Capture app in your Applications folder.Click once on the scanner on the left side, then click on Show Details along the bottom. Along the right side you will see LOTS of options for scanning and saving. I am employed by HPSay thanks by clicking "Kudos" "thumbs up" in the post that helped you.
